THE VISION OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

BY WENDELL PRULLIPS GARRISON. April 14, 1865.

Dreaming, he woke, our martyr President, And still the vision lingered in his mind (Problem at once and prophecy combined)-A flying bark with all her canvas bent-Joy-bringing berald of some great event. Oft when the wavering scale of war inclined To freedom's side: now how to be divined Uncertain, since rebell'on's force was spent. So, of the omen heedful as fate, neoln with curious eye the horizon reanned At morn, with hopes of port and peace elate; At night, like Palinurus—in his hand The broken tiller of the Ship of Statelions on the margin of the Promised Land. -Harper's Magazine for April.

TRUE AS GOLD.

We called him Lord John is our school days, he was so aristocratic a youth, but John Lord was the way it was in the baptismal register in the old Ballaire Episcopal Church, A proud family, too, with plenty of money and enough dignity to carry it; a family that had sent soldiers to the Revo-Intion and statesmen to Congress, and about whose hospitable board the best of the land assembled on great occasions; yet withal a family that had instincts and training, a courtly, noble race, that seldom descended to mean things, the natural leaders of the pld country aristocracy.

It was twenty-five years ago that we played together, the boys of the old Huygencamp private school, and Lord John, with his proud, slender form, his brilliant eyes, his curly hair of dark auburn, was sixteen that year. His birthday came in term time, and old Colonel Lord and his wife visited him with their daughter, Lord John's siater, a belle of Newport and Washington Birce but then only a fair-haired child of twelve. The old Colonel brought out a great hamper of cakes and chicken, and jellies and home-made confectionery, and gave it smiling to Lord John "for you and your school mates, my son." If the Colonel had been able to look fifteen years along the curgent of years he was the man to have felt like giving his son a pistol bullet or ten grains of strychnine, just to keep him from being a disgrace to the proud old family.

Ten years passed; Lord John was the weelthiest and handsomest young man in the region, and might have had his pick of girls from New England or from the Sunny South-of Senators' or of millionaires' daughters. For there was that about him which made him attractive to every one. The rest of the boys had scattered, some in business, some plain farmers, some had becon e regular globe-trotters; Lord John was alwost the only one who staid by the Bel-laire homestead in the heart of lovely Mary-

Whatever possessed Lord John to fly in the face of his training and go over to Rallsville, the homely little factory village, and fall in love with Mary Beeton, I don't know. She was certainly a pretty thing, appealing eyes and modest ways, the daughter of a farmer somewhere along the Susquehanna, and had only been at work a few months in the factory where, indeed, the Lord family owned most of the stock. They say she was unednested, but a girl of unusual powers of mind; you go there to-day and people will tell you of Mary's resolve to make something of herself. Nobody knows what passed between them or what promises he made her, but brought up as she had been, to feel that there was a great gulf fixed between the "nigher and lower" classes of society, there could at lest be only one result—the poor

They say that Lord John took her to Baltimore and kept her there awhile, but he covered his tracks so well that when he grew tited of poor Mary, and courted and won a famous New Orleans heiress and beauty, the story about the Beston girl was a long time in reaching the ears of interested parties.

At lest, just the day before the wedding, the proud young Creole, in whose yeins the best of French, Spanish and American blood flowed, was in the summer house on the hill overlooking the broad Chesapeake. She was troubled and unhappy; her feelings toward Lord John had slowly changed, for there was a lack of devotion on his part that boded ill for the future. She admired his brilliancy, and that was all.

Into the arbor stepped a worn and faded beauty and confronted the proud Creole. "Are you going marry Lord John?" she cried. "Then ask him at the altar who Mary Beeton is," and she turned to leave

Angevine Dutot bade her pause and asked her with cold sereuity the reason for her words, satisfied herself of the truth of th story from letters in her betrothed handwriting, dismissed the wronged woman and returned to the house-that of her relatives where she had been spending the summer.
She wrote a letter to Lord John, only a few Jizes advising him to marry Mary Beeton.
She told the servant to pack her trunks and send them after her; and within two hours she was on her way to New Orlians with her faithful maid and a small hand valise for luggage. That was the way she cut the igordian knot-a heroine I call her, and what is woman. When she got back to New Orleans she sent for her lawyer and told him to put a trustworthy detective on the track of Mary Beston and find out all about her.

"Why?" asked the lawyer, an old and "Because one sin should not wreck a wo-man's life any more than it does a man's. If she is repentant, if elements of good yet re-main, I shall take care of her, even though he refuses to marry her. She has been cast like a sea waif across my track, and I can not sgnore my plain duty. At any rate she shall have some sort of a chance again, but my identity must, of course, remain concealed forever." Lord John was awfully cut up by the af-fair, which proved more than a nine days' talk. The story assumed protean shapes, and was told in every clab room, saloon and public place. It furnished the basis for columns of spicy comment in most of the local and city journals of the State, and the main facts were telegraphed far and wide.

The old Colonel tried to seize him by the throat when they first met after the excose, and his feebler mother rushed between, and soon after fainted on the floor, while his sister simply ignored his existence. They all of them went too far. It was the public dis-grace and the being talked about far more than the treatment of the roor little factory girl that the old Colonel grew wild over. And Lord John, after swearing at his relatives and the community at large, went West without more than $10 in his pocket. And he went alone.

Mary Beeten moved to a little village on the eastern slope of the Alleghanies, over-looking the bine and broad Susquehanna,

"So long as you. Mary Beeton, continue to handsome complexion. These can all be acquired by using Dr. Harter's Irou Tonic.

you try to help others, you will each month receive $30 from an unknown friend, who advises you to go to some distant region where you are not known at all, and where you can begin life under another name, only communicate your moves to the enclosed address, a lawyer in New York."

She went to Western Nebraska, on the very frontier, became Mary Atwood, and a school teacher at that. People say she was greatly admired and had a lot of offers, but she never encouraged them. The fact is, it was Lord Jehn she had in her mind all the while. But he was away off on the Rio Grande, and going to the dogs fast enough; and the old Colonel was dying, and Angevine Dutot nad just married and gone to

Then, suddenly, circumstances took Mary to Denver for a visit to friends. Quiet, ladylike Miss Atwood she was now, and the past seemed to her each year more like a bad dream. A few weeks later, as some tourists drove into a mountain town, shots were heard, then shouts, and horses galloping away: a disturbance had evidently occurred. 'What is it?" they cried, and the ladies of the party shuddered with fear.

Only cowboys from the Rio Grande. Two rival parties and a quarrel. One of them is badly hurt and is apt to die." "An' it'll serve him right," said a bystander. "He's been a terror these five years;

ever since he cum to the mountains.' "Well," said another, "that's all right. His time's short. But I'm kinder sorry to hear him callin' for 'mother' and for There was a moment's pause. Then Mary Atwood spoke up. 'I must see this poor man." And after expostulating with her in vain they took her to his presence. Lord John? Yes; the wreck of him scarred by knife-thrust and bullet, wounded now so that life seemed impossible, and showing in every feature the result of dissi-Mary turned to the little company, some friends, come strangers. Her eyes bright ened. she spoke in a firm, clear tone:

"This is John Lord, a gentleman of good family," she said. "He promised to marry me, but failed to keep his promise. My place is by his side." It was a close shave, but Lord recovered and married Mary, and she has made quite a respectable citizen out of what was rather crooked material, to tell the truth, for a man doesn't spend five years as a reckless desperado without getting some habits and principles that nothing on earth can destroy. They live on a Colorado ranche, and are happy in that free and inspiring land beneath the snow peaks of the Rockies.

CHARGING THE OIL WELLS.

Extreme Caution Necessary in Handling the Explosives.

OLEAN, N. Y., March 28. - In all the oil regions of Pennsylvania, up to the discovery of the Thorn Creek district, in Butler County, great care had to the taken in torpedoing a newly drilled well so that the charge of nitro-glycerine might not be too heavy. If the charge was too great the sandrock would be so badly shattered that the well would be filled up, and long and expensive work was rendered necessary in order to clean it out softiciently to permit the insertion of the tubing. A twenty-quart torpedo was about the average size used, and it was exploded in the shell at the bottom of the well. In the Thorn Creek region the explosive, to the extent of 200 quarts—enough to destroy a city—is dumped into the well, after the drill has entered the sandrock far enough, and exploded. The sand is of such a pattern that it does not drill in and sill not have nature that it does not drift in and fill up the cavity after the shot, no matter how heavy the charge may be. It is not practicable to make, nor would it be safe to handle, a 200-quart torpedo of nitro-glycerine, so a new shell has been invented to meet the requirements of the Thorn Creek wells. The shell is so constructed that after it has been lowered to its place in the well its contents may be dumped into the cavity in the sandrock. The shell is then carefully holsted to the surface, filled again with nitro-glycerine, and relowered to the rock and dumped a second time. This dangerous proceeding is repeated until the required quantity of nitro-glycerine has been turned into the well, when it is exploded. The tubing can be run down at once, and the well is ready for operations. This peculiarity of the Thorn Creek sand facilities operations greatly, but it makes the business of well-shooting, which under ordinary circumstances places the lives of the workmen in constant jeopardy, tenfold more dangerous.

Habitual constipation is not only one of the most unpleasant, but at the same time one of the most injurious conditions of the human system, and is but a forerunner of disease, unless removed. This is usually accomplished by the use of purgatives, which for the time afford relief, but after their immediate effects have passed they leave the system in a worse state than before. To effect a cure it is necessary that the remedy used should be one that not only by its cathartic effects relieves the bowels but at the same time acts as a tonic so as to restore the organs to a sound, healthy condition. This Prickly Ash Bitters will do. It removes the cause and restores health.

In England, mady years ago, the Government sought to promote good farming by loaning money at very low rate of interest to be used in underdraining. The loans were in every instance repaid, as they were a lien upon the land, and its increased productive capacity enabled the farmers to grow larger and more profitable crops.

The Army and the Navy, The Bar and the Bench, the Pulpit and the Press, all ranks and classes of people have sent us their personal experience and thanks for the last fifty years, until their letters have filled bulky volumes, testifying to the wonderful cures effected by Pond's Extract. This favorite medicine is the people's great remedy for all forms of inflammations, hemorrhuges, piles, sore throat, boils, burns, sprains and all kindred diseases. It continally grows in popular appreciation. ally grows in popular appreciation. Genuine in bottles with buff wrappers only.

Democrat reports a steer eighteen feet long from the root of his tail to the top of his head, six feet four ir ches tall, eleven feet four inches around the girth, three feet four inches between the tip of the hips, and weighing 4,250 pounds. This animal is by long odds the largest steer in the world.

Completely Cured After Nineteen Years' Agonizing Suffering

The New York World says: The case of Mrs. John Gemmill, a highly respected lady of Milroy, Mifflin County, Pennsylvania, presents a striking example of suffering and marvelous cure. In the spring 1864 she was thrown from a wagon, injuring her spine. She was a helpless cripple, unable to walk, from that time until the spring of 1883. She tried numerous remedies, but found no relief during these nineteen years of acute suffering. She remained in a partially paralyed condition, until having providentially seen the advertisement of St. Jacobs Oil, the Con-queror of Pain, she bought two bottles. The oil was applied to the afflicted parts. Before the second bottle was exhausted she was able to walk about, and has been completely

He Sold His Crutches After Eighteen Years' Suffering, a Cured Man.

The Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal says: Professor C. A. Donaldson, the well-known pioneer, who was severely wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, from the effects of which he suffered with rheumatism for over eighteen years, has been an almost constant sufferer and cripple, on crutches. He states that he worked for years and spent $10,000 in trying to get rid of his pain. He tried doctors, famous baths, electric appliances, and all kinds of liniments, without relief. Finally, he tried St. Jacobs Oil. 'My crutches!' he exclaimed yesterday, 'I sold them. That St. Jacobs Oil I have been using has completely cured me. It is a wonderful remedy, and I shall always remember its discoverers with gratitude."

From a Helpless Cripple to Health and Happiness.

The San Francisco (Cal.) Chronicle publishes the statement of Captain W. F. Swasey, the oldest pioneer of San Francisco, regarding the remarkable case of his friend, Colonel D. J. Williamson, an army officer, and ex United States Consul, the facts of which are confirmed by Colonel Williamson in a letter appended, and which are in sub-stance as follows: Colonel Williamson, after long years of intense suffering from scute rheumatism, and after using all other known remedies, the baths of other countries, and spending $20,000 without relief, was cured by St. Jacobs Oil, the Conqueror of Pain, and has thrown away his crutches, siter having been a helpless cripple for years.

"I Have Been Partially Dead and Am Cured."

The Baltimore, Md., Morning Herald publishes the following statement of Major B S. White, salesman, Baltimore, Md.: "I have been a partially dead man for ten years. My flesh was cold and lifeless. Doctors attributed my suffering to the enlargement of certain glands. The quantity of medicine I took without relief would set up an apothecary shop. I tried Turkish and Electric baths with only temporary relief. Finally St. Jacobs Oil was recommended. I tried it, rubbing my spine thoroughly with it. This was repeated several times, and all the knots, kinks and stiffness passed away. thank God I am myself again. I have no hesitation in saying that for acute local pains St. Jacobs Oil is a safe, certain and speedy remedy for man or beast,"

Promptly Cured After Being Utterly Help.

The St. Louis Post Dispatch publishes the following editorially: "A remarkable case has just come to the notice of a reporter of this paper, who, having been informed of the wonderful cure of Mrs. Phoebe Rice. 1,208 Madison street, a sister of Hon. H. Clay Sexton, Chief of the St. Louis Fire Depart-ment, visited that lady at her residence. She was very enthusiastic in her commendations of the pain-relieving and curative powers of St. Jacobs Oil, which she said had accomplished more for her in a few weeks than all the other remedies the physicians had recommended in the past seven years. Mrs. Rice made her statement without the least reluctance, and very readily said that for the past seven years she had been a sufferer from affected the muscles of the hands, contracting them so badly she could not comb her hair, hold a needle or pick up a pin, and rendered the lower limbs so helpless she required crutches to move. During ten months she was obliged to carry the right arm in a sling. Physicians were called in, but gave her only temporary relief. Some time ago one of her children was afflicted with a contraction of the muscles of the lower jaw. which turned her mouth to one side. A few applications of St. Jacobs Oil restored the features to their natural condition, and Mrs. Rice began to look honefully toward it for her own cure. A single application, she said, made her a firm believer in its virtues, as the effect was instantaneous and she was greatly benefited. The continued use of it brought her to the happy condition in which the reporter saw her, with the free use of her limbs and in perfect health, cured now run up and down stairs, she said, and her bands were as useful in every respect as they had been before she began to suffer, seven years ago. 'God bless St. Jacobs Oil, the good lady exclaimed as the re-porter was about to leave. Mrs. Rice has lived in this city thirty years, and her state ment, worthy of all credence, is fully cor-roborated by her friends and neighbors and by her own children, who were fully cognizant of her helpless condition before she began to use the wonderful remedy. Regards it a Greater Discovery Than Electricity.

The Chicago (Ill) Times says: "Mr. J. D. L. Harvey, a merchant of high standing, and proprietor of the Palace Market of this city, states: 'I have spent $2,000 to cure my wife of rheumatism. St. Jacobs Oil accomplished what all the medical treatment and other remedies failed to bring about. I regard it as a greater discovery than electricity."

The above are by no means exceptional or isolated cases, but from all parts of the world come similar testimonials of the efficacy of St. Jacobs Oil to conquer pain and relieve suffering. No other remedy or medicine has effected such cures. No other remedy has ever received such indorsements; and to-day St. Jacobs Oil is the only proprietary medi-cine on earth which has been awarded the supreme distinction of Gold Medals at the Great World's Fairs and Industrial Expositions. At Calcutts, New Zeland, Louisville, Cincinnati, California and elsewhere, where, in competition with other remedies, it was subjected to the most crucial tests by scientific experts and after exhaustive trial in hospitals, St. Jacobs Oil received the highest awards and First Prize Gold Medals for being the best pain-cure. These magnificent Gold Medals may be inspected at our Baltimore establishment; and St. Jacobs Oil, which is better than gold, is for sale by all druggists and dealers in medicine throughout the United States, at fifty cents a bottle. Direc-VICERLER Co., sole proprietors, Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

ANOTHER PLACE FOR MR. HIGGINS. A Denial That Senator Gorman Solicited

the Appointment. Baltimore Special.

No reply has yet been received from Secretary Manning by the Civil Service Reform Association relative to the appointment of Eugene Higgins to the position of Appointing Clerk in the Treasury. A gentleman identified with national politics and intimate with Senator Gorman and Cabinet officers, in speaking of the Higgins matter today, said:

"There is an erroneous impression about this appointment. The truth is that Secretary Manning had intended, and I think yet intends, a better place for Mr. Higgins. The appointment was decided on by the Secretary himself, and it was he that asked Senator Gorman about Mr. Higgins instead of the appointment being solicited by Senator Gorman. Although the noise which has been made about the appointment is not relished by the Secretary, he has no idea of being influenced in the slightest degree by the protests made to him. Should there be any change in the status of Mr. Higgins the public may rest assured it will be to his adventage. I also hear that in a few days ex-Governor John Lee Carroll will receive a reply to his recent letter to Senator Gor-

Great Suffering Among the People for Want of Food-Much Stock Dead From Starvation.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 28.-Information received from the suffering districts says the people are in a bad condition and on the verge of starvation. The people are asking for bread, the animals are starving to death in many places, and strong men are begging for an ear of corn to keep soul and body together. Their condition is distressing. In many parts the suffering is terrible.
Many gain a livelihood by running timber, but for months there has been no rise in the rivers or mountain streams: hence the people are suffering for food because no timber can be run. Unless a rise comes toon, there will yet be months of suffering. The people held out well, trying to keep the story of their suffering from going abroad, but the time has come when hunger pinches them, and they ask for food. In the northern part of the country great suffering is experienced. Among mountain farmers and lumbermen matters are truly distressing Children and women eat parched corn when they can get it, and are thankul. The winter is severe, the people are poor, and there is no work. In many places stock have died in large numbers from starvation.

PINKEYE,

A Singular Epidemie at Yale College-Doesn't Come From Being Out Late.

NEW HAVEN, Conu., March 28.-About twenty-five students in Yale College are suffering from an eye affection which is vaguely termed "pinkeye. The cases have all developed since Friday, and, it is thought, from the rapid spread of the disease. that an annoying epidemic has broken out. The physicians, however, do not regard the trouble in the light of an epidemic. "It's a little catarrhal trouble," said one of them yesterday: "we see more or less or it every spring. It is caused by the dust and cold, and is not contagious." The victims of this annoyance are surprised with the suddenness with which the trouble comes upon them. They go to bed at night with their eyes all right, and when they awaken next morning they can scarcely open their eyelids, which are in-flamed and swollen. Water runs from the eyes, and blue-glass goggles are called into use. Quife a number of the junior class in the Sheffield Scientific School are afflicted with the trouble, and have been obliged to absent themselves from recitations in concequence. The disease usually wears itself out, or is cured in two or three days It is not confined to the students alone. Several persons throughout the city have been afflicted

"Oh, that is a secret just now," said Mr. Boker, laughing. "Nobody but Mr. Lawrence Barrett and myself know what the play will be called." "Is it a tragedy

"Well, no. not exactly; that is, it does not end with the death of the hero, although he is supposed to die a few years afterward. I suppose I may call it a strong emotional play. It will be produced next season, and of course Mr. Barrett will star in it. The scenery and costumes for its elaborate production are now being prepared in New York under Mr. Barrett's direction."

Catarrh

Is a very prevalent and exceedingly disagreeable disease, liable, if neglected, to develop into serious consumption. Being a constitutional disease, it requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, effecting a radical and permanent cure of catarrh in even its most severe forms. Made only by C. J. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

It is not a drink, but a medicine used by many physicians. It is invaluable for DYSPEPSIA, KIDNEY and LIVER COMPLAINTS, NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, WEAKNESS, INDIGESTION, &c.; and while curing will not hurt the system.

Notice to Gas Consumers and Others. .

Your attention is called to the marked reduction in the price of gas, which took effect on the 1st day of March. The Company is now furnishing gas to all consumers at $1 80 per 1,000 cubic feet. This price is certainly within the reach of all, for both lighting and cooking purposes. The convenience and comfort of cooking by gas, especially during the summer months, where a fire is not otherwise required, can only be thoroughly appreciated by those who have had experience in its useful application for that purpose. The Company has sold for use in this city during the last four years a large number of gas stoves, and is satisfied from the many testimontals from its patrons, that these stoves "fill a long felt want."
